

RADCLIFFE 250

A society of 250 individuals connected by an Oxford icon

The Radcliffe 250 brings together individuals with a shared commitment to safeguarding and promoting one of Oxford's great symbols of science, research and education: the Radcliffe Observatory.

Its members will help secure the future of this extraordinary landmark and its place at the heart of Green Templeton College for generations to come.

The Radcliffe Observatory is among the 2.5% of listed buildings in England designated Grade I, placing it among the country's most important historic buildings.

It is also the beating heart of Green Templeton College, a graduate college whose community spans business, health, policy, social science, entrepreneurship and global leadership.

By joining the Radcliffe 250, members become part of a community supporting both the future of an Oxford landmark and a college recognised for its interdisciplinary thinking, international outlook and commitment to addressing some of society's most pressing challenges.

ONE GIFT. SEVEN YEARS OF RECOGNITION

A one-off gift of £2,500 to the Radcliffe Observatory secures membership of the Radcliffe 250.

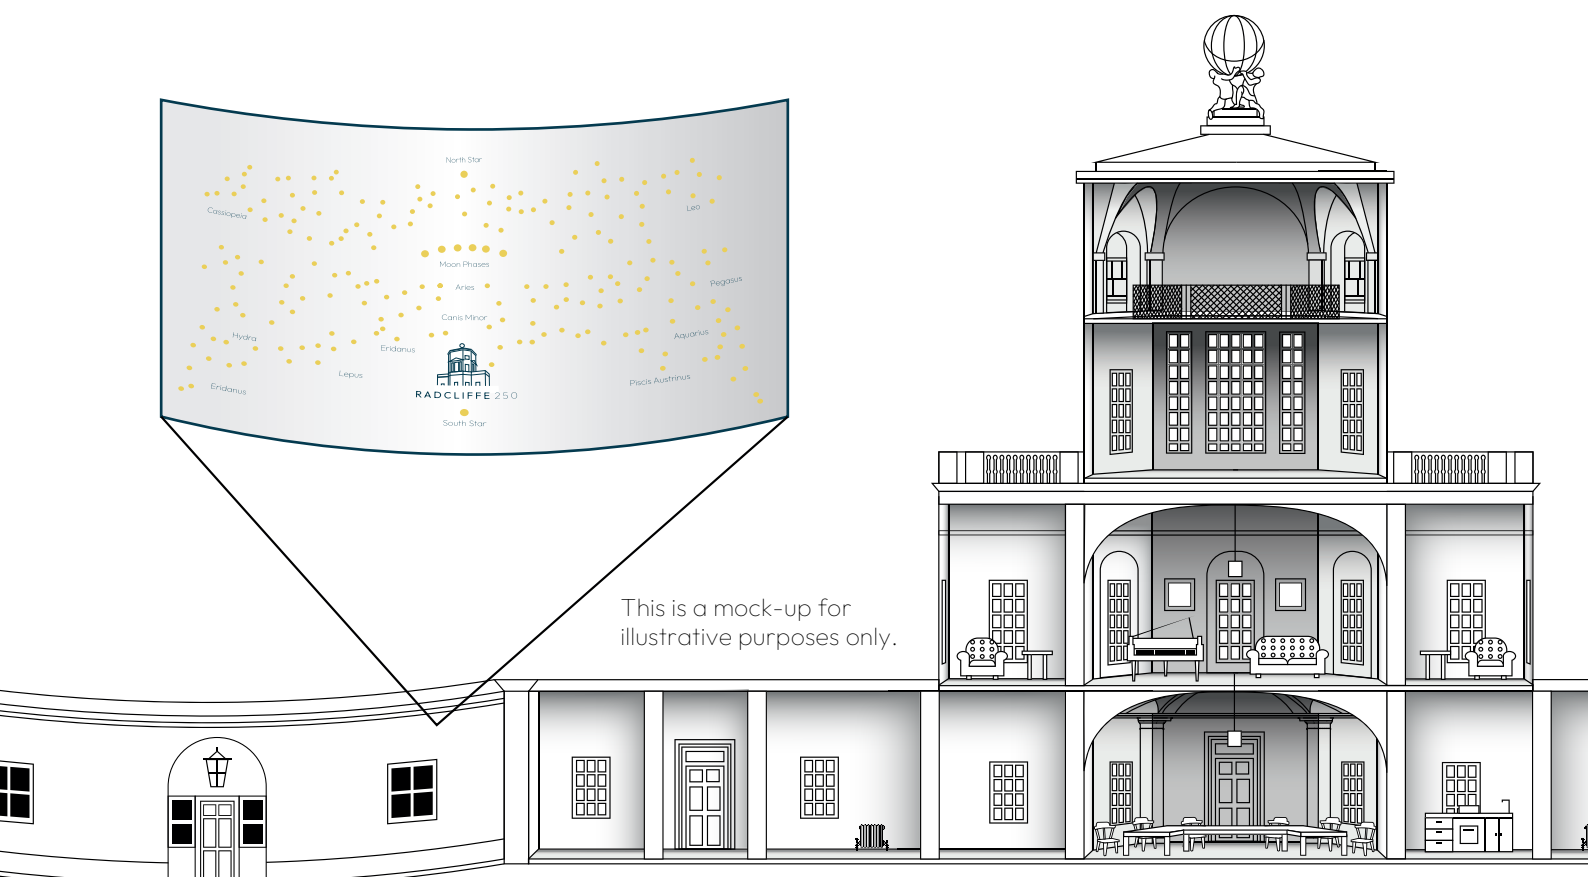

Your name will be displayed for seven years as part of a dedicated installation at the new entrance to Green Templeton College and the Radcliffe Observatory, alongside those of fellow Radcliffe 250 members.

Your name will be seen by the thousands of students, scholars, academics, philanthropists, and leaders who come through our doors each year.

I am proud to be part of the Radcliffe 250 and to have chosen the North Star – a fitting symbol for a building that has long embodied discovery, direction and ambition.

The Radcliffe Observatory is central to the identity of our college and an important part of Oxford's heritage. I hope others will join us in safeguarding it, so that it can continue to inspire generations to come.
